The Widow. A widow is a dangerous thing, With soft, black, shining curls, And looketh more bewitching, Than a host of romping girls; Her laugh is so delicious-So knowing, clear, beside, You'd never dream her thinking Soon to become a bride.

Her dress though made of Sable, Gives roundness to her form-A touch of something thoughtful, A witching, winning charm; And when she sits down by you, With quiet and easy grace--A tear may tall unbidden,, Or a smile light up her face.

Her voice is soft-melodious-And lute-like in its tone : She sometimes sighs " 'tis dreadful To pass through life alone," And then she'll tell you, you remind her Of the loved one dead and gone: Your steps, your form, your features: Thus the widow will run on,

Oh! listen, yet be careful. For well she plays her part-Her lips distill the negtar
That doth enslave the heart; Be guarded, or she'll win you, With sighs, and smiles, and tears; I' faith shall wear the breeches, too, And box your silly care.
